

2021/2022 Faculty Fellow

Angela Criscoe is an Associate Professor of Film, Television, and Digital Media Production in the Department of Communication. She earned her M.F.A. in Film and Television from Savannah College of Art & Design. Her teaching and research are focused in innovative film and television production processes in storytelling across multiple platforms. She has participated in nationally recognized Fellowships with the National Association of Television Program Executives, the Television Academy Faculty Seminar, and the HERS Leadership Institute. She has published scholarly and creative works in the Journal of Media Education, Teaching Journalism & Mass Communication, and Broadcast Education Association.

Angela has served on the University Senate, Academic Technology Advisory Committee, and is currently participating as a USG HIPs Implementation faculty and HIPs Scholar with a focus on Internships. Her leadership service includes serving as the Mass Communication Program Coordinator, Internship Coordinator, and as the current Interim Executive Director for the School of Continuing and Professional Studies.