Religious Holidays: 2020 – 2021 Academic Year

The following information is a limited list of religious and cultural holidays that students may need academic accommodations. Although many of these days are not university holidays, the information can be used by instructors or supervisors at their discretion when responding to student requests for accommodations for religious purposes. Making accommodations does not excuse a student of any course requirements, but rather supports adjustments to honor their religious observances.

Please take special note of those holidays that have been designated non-work days by the religions that celebrate them.
